Architemet (interests

First-year and Senior students are assessed each year.

A report of assessment results is prepared every two years in the summers of even years.

Assessment results are reviewed

Test-at-a-Glance

	ity t	ghten® @ # ")
	1.	dimension, test takers are asked to self-report on their reactions to etical situations in ways that demonstrate their: , or ability to maintain composure and well-being in uncertain situations without compromising effectiveness; and , or evaluation of cross-cultural situations as favorable; and , or belief that they can successfully engage in cross-cultural situations.
For	the	dimensions, test takers are assessed in several areas.
For	the 1.	dimension, areas of emphasis include: : The degree to which an individual understands the impact of their own culture, values, preferences and previous experiences on his or her cognitive, emotional, and behavioral responses : Attention to the physical, verbal and nonverbal behaviors and cues : n actions
	3.	and signals : Active consideration of others' potential viewpoints/Active refrainment of preconceived cultural schema interfering with information processing
	4.	: Utilization of relevant declarative cultural knowledge in an interaction

For the dimension, test takers are .0427 Tc30002 (h)3.007 (e) $\mathbb{8}$ (erferin) 4 Tc(a in) 2. $\mathbb{9}a. $\mathbb{9}$ (ne) $\mathbb{8}$ (erferin) 4 it

The HEIghten® Intercultural Competency and Diversity test features two types of tasks.

For the domain, items present test takers with a set of short statements with which they are asked to rate their agreement on a 4- ongly of the saccessible and easy for students to relate to.

The dimensions are assessed with 40 test items, which follow the Likert items. Test takers are presented with a range of cross-cultural scenarios and questions relating to each scenario.

In single-select or multiple-select multiple-choice formats, test takers are asked to indicate the best or most appropriate response or responses with the aim of creating or maintaining positive interactions and relationships in cross-cultural settings.

The scenarios or situations are set in the following contexts:

Study abroad
Teaching abroad
Travel (work or leisure) abroad
International teamwork
Guests from another culture
Sub-cultures within the U.S.

The scenarios describe situations that may be different from those that are common in the test use of the common in the test of the common in the common in